2nd February 2018

Dear Parents and Guardians

This week has been the final week of our 'Colour, Pattern and Shape' topic as we will be celebrating Chinese New Year next week, which falls on Friday 16th February.

We have been reading the Elmer stories by David McKee, looking closely at the colours and patterns on all of the elephants. This adult led activity enabled the children to create their own patchwork elephant, talking about the colours they were using as they made their collage. Some of us talked about how Elmer felt being different from the other elephants and how we are different from each other, looking at our own special qualities.

It has been a busy start to the term with the children engaging in a great deal of hands-on activities. They have been challenged in terms of their colour and shape knowledge, developing their levels of understanding and learning about new concepts. The classroom has been transformed into an array of beautiful colours, brightening up a dull January!
